Bacardi Rum Carta Blanca

Lime, mint, cane sugar and soda

In the 1500s, Sir Francis Drake landed in Havana to sack the city of its gold. The invasion was unsuccessful, but luckily for us something good did come of it. His crew were suffering from dysentery and scurvy. Local South American Indians were known to have remedies for many diseases, so a small party went ashore to Cuba and came back with ingredients for a medicine. They used aguardiente de cane, mint leaves, and the juices from sugar cane and limes to put together a tonic which turned out to be effective.
